

Kane's Story

We supported Kane throughout her time at Methodist High School in Lesotho in 2014 and 2015. She is now studying General Accounting at the Centre for Accounting Studies.

Kane's family managed to pay for her to go to our partner school in Lesotho, Ha Fusi but could not afford for her to go to high school. No one in her household has a job and she was the first to complete secondary school.

We supported Kane throughout her time at Methodist High School in 2014 and 2015. She was then able to progress on to the Centre for Accounting Studies without our support as the government provides free places at the centre.

Kane hopes to do a Masters but in the meantime is looking for an internship so she can get work experience to secure long-term employment.

Kane is helping others in her community as a result of being supported by Rafiki Thabo. She provides free tutoring classes to high level and secondary school learners and once she has a job she would like to support other pupils who are struggling to afford fees at her former school, Ha Fusi.

“I would really like to pass my gratitude to Rafiki Thabo Foundation as I have achieved my goal of being an accountant... You have really changed my homestead way of living due to a little earning they have each month. Thank you very much Rafiki Thabo Foundation, my life has really changed.”

To support Kane cost Rafiki Thabo £154 per year
